Yeast and buckwheat give poffertjes their light, spongy and slightly chewy texture. Let the batter rise properly, and flip them as soon as the bottoms are golden.

INGREDIENTS

- 400 ml lukewarm milk, about 38 °C
- 1 tbsp sugar
- 7 g (2½ tsp) active dry or instant yeast
- 150 g plain flour
- 100 g buckwheat flour
- A pinch of salt
- 2 large eggs
- Butter, melted, for the pan
- To serve: butter and icing sugar

METHOD

1. Wake the yeast. Stir the milk, sugar and yeast together and leave for 5–10 minutes, until frothy.
2. Mix the dry ingredients. Whisk both flours and the salt in a large bowl.
3. Make the batter. Add the yeast mixture and the eggs and whisk until completely smooth; a hand mixer helps.
4. Let it rise. Cover and leave in a warm place for about 1 hour, until doubled, light and bubbly.
5. Heat the pan. Heat a poffertjes pan over medium heat and brush each hollow generously with melted butter.
6. Fill and cook. Pour the batter into a squeeze bottle or piping bag and fill each hollow about three-quarters full. Cook for 1–2 minutes, until the bottoms are golden and bubbles show on top.
7. Flip. Turn each one with a skewer or fork and cook for about 1 minute more, until golden.
8. Serve. Pile them on a plate while warm, top with a knob of butter and dust heavily with icing sugar.

NOTES

- An aebleskiver pan works instead of a poffertjes pan; the poffertjes come out rounder.
- The note gave cup measures that don't match its grams (1¾ cups is closer to 220 g of flour), so this uses the grams.
