Salsa verde

Roy Choi's charred tomatillo, chili and scallion salsa with lime and rice vinegar

Makes about 500 ml (2 cups) · Prep 10 min · Cook 15 min · Adapted from masterclass.com

The flavour comes from charring the vegetables properly, so take each one off the heat as soon as it is blistered and soft, before it burns.

INGREDIENTS

- 1 tbsp cooking oil, plus more as needed
- 2 large tomatillos, husked and rinsed
- 3 garlic cloves, peeled
- 6 scallions
- 2 jalapeños
- 2 serrano chillies
- 1 bunch cilantro with stems, roughly chopped (about 1½ cups)
- 2 limes
- 125 ml (½ cup) rice vinegar
- 3 large pinches kosher salt
- 2 large pinches freshly ground black pepper

METHOD

1. Char the vegetables. Heat the oil in a large skillet or on a griddle over medium-high heat. Add the tomatillos, garlic, scallions, jalapeños and serranos and turn them often until blistered and blackened in spots, 10–15 minutes. Take each one off as soon as it has softened.
2. Prepare the chillies. Let everything cool a little. Pull the stems off the chillies; for a milder salsa, split them and scrape out the seeds.
3. Fill the blender. Put the charred vegetables in the blender jar and pack the cilantro on top. Squeeze in the juice of both limes, then add the rice vinegar, salt and pepper.
4. Blend. Blend on high for about 15 seconds, just until smooth. If it is too thick, blend on low with a splash of water or oil.
5. Season. Taste and adjust the salt and pepper.

NOTES

- Keeps for up to a week in a sealed jar in the fridge.
- Rolling the limes firmly on the counter before halving them gets more juice out.
- Made for tacos, especially the Kogi short rib tacos with Kalbi marinade beef, but also good with eggs and grilled fish.