Kogi vinaigrette

Roy Choi's ginger, chili and soy dressing, blended in one go

Makes about 1.5 litres (6 cups) · Prep 10 min · Adapted from masterclass.com

One of the Kogi truck's mother sauces: everything goes in the blender at once. Use unseasoned rice vinegar, or the dressing ends up too sweet.

INGREDIENTS

- 5 cm (2 in) knob of ginger
- 4 garlic cloves, peeled
- 3 scallions, roughly chopped
- 60 ml (¼ cup) gochugaru (Korean chili flakes)
- 50 g (¼ cup) sugar
- 1 tbsp kosher salt
- 2 tsp black pepper
- 250 ml (1 cup) soy sauce
- 500 ml (2 cups) unseasoned rice vinegar
- 125 ml (½ cup) toasted sesame oil
- 250 ml (1 cup) neutral oil, such as canola or grapeseed

METHOD

1. Peel the ginger. Scrape off the skin with the edge of a spoon, then slice it into thin coins.
2. Blend. Put the ginger and everything else in the blender jar and blend on high for about 15 seconds, until smooth.
3. Store. Pour into a sealable jar and refrigerate. Shake before using, as the oil separates.

NOTES

- Keeps for up to 3 months in the fridge, according to the source.
- Toss it through shredded cabbage for Kogi slaw, use it on salads and cold noodles, or brush it over grilled meat and vegetables.
